Fostering a Community Focused on Identity-conscious Leadership

So often humans want to lean into the ideals of "I just see people as people" and "Why don't we just focus on being good people." The reality is that only focusing on the "person" increases our likelihood to miss the ways in which identity impacts our learners, colleagues, and anyone we encounter. The unintentional impact can lead to masking one's identities and retention issues because team members do not know how to support one another or their students. Join the presenters in exploring identity-conscious leadership to empower those around us to live authentically and encourage us to show up for each other in real and meaningful ways.
